

CONTENTS

|                           |      |
|---------------------------|------|
| Foreword .....            | ix   |
| Introduction .....        | xi   |
| Participants .....        | xiii |
| Programme committee ..... | xxi  |

I. PROLEGOMENA

|                                                                      |    |
|----------------------------------------------------------------------|----|
| Epidemiologic clues to host factors in human carcinogenesis          |    |
| P. Cole .....                                                        | 3  |
| Carcinogenesis as a multistage process – experimental evidence       |    |
| I.B. Weinstein .....                                                 | 9  |
| Carcinogenesis as a multistage process – evidence from human studies |    |
| R. Peto .....                                                        | 27 |
| Rapporteur's Report                                           |    |
| C. Heidelberger .....                                                | 29 |

II. GENETIC AND FAMILIAL FACTORS

|                                                                                                  |     |
|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| Cytogenetics of heritability in cancer                                                           |     |
| H.J. Evans .....                                                                                 | 35  |
| Heritable cancer-prone disorders featuring carcinogen hypersensitivity and DNA repair deficiency |     |
| M.C. Paterson .....                                                                              | 57  |
| Genetic and familial factors in cancer: A population perspective                                 |     |
| W.J. Schull & K.M. Weiss .....                                                                   | 87  |
| Clinical genetics of human cancer                                                                |     |
| J.J. Mulvihill .....                                                                             | 107 |
| Malignancy, DNA damage and chromosomal aberrations in ataxia telangiectasia                      |     |
| A.M.R. Taylor & M.J. Edwards .....                                                               | 119 |
| Genetic complementation analysis of ataxia telangiectasia by somatic cell fusion                 |     |
| N.G.J. Jaspers & D. Bootsma .....                                                                | 127 |
| Cytogenetic demonstration of a corrective factor in Bloom's syndrome                             |     |
| H.W. Rüdiger .....                                                                               | 137 |
| Familial cancer research in Basel                                                                |     |
| H. Müller, W. Weber & J. Ott .....                                                               | 147 |

|                                                                        |     |
|------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| Genetic study of host factors in gastroduodenal carcinogenesis in rats |     |
| K. Morino, H. Ohgaki, N. Matsukura, T. Kawachi & T. Sugimura . . . . . | 153 |
| Rapporteur's Report                                             |     |
| J.J. Mulvihill . . . . .                                               | 157 |

III. OTHER FACTORS

|                                                                                                               |     |
|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| Environmental modifiers in carcinogenesis                                                                     |     |
| H.C. Pitot . . . . .                                                                                          | 165 |
| ✓ Nutritional aspects of human carcinogenesis                                                                 |     |
| A.B. Miller . . . . .                                                                                         | 177 |
| Endocrine factors in human carcinogenesis                                                                     |     |
| B. Armstrong . . . . .                                                                                        | 193 |
| Host factors important in immune surveillance against tumours                                                 |     |
| G.L. Ada . . . . .                                                                                            | 223 |
| Some etiological factors in large-bowel cancer                                                                |     |
| M.H. Thompson & M.J. Hill . . . . .                                                                           | 241 |
| Evaluation of tumour promoters by the hamster embryo cell transformation assay                                |     |
| E. Rivedal & T. Sanner . . . . .                                                                              | 251 |
| Susceptibility determinants for mouse epidermal carcinogenesis                                                |     |
| J.E. Strickland, H. Hennings, P.T. Allen, A.M. Jetten, A.G. Strickland, K.B. Hellman & S.H. Yuspa . . . . .   | 259 |
| Hormones and the single cell: a relationship prerequisite for transformation                                  |     |
| C. Borek, D.L. Guernsey & I.S. Edelman . . . . .                                                              | 269 |
| Cell-mediated immune response to syngeneic tumour growth and its inhibition by low doses of radiation in mice |     |
| M. Gerber, Y. Pioch, J.B. Dubois & B. Serrou . . . . .                                                        | 279 |
| Early changes in growth control of cells in culture induced by a chemical carcinogen                          |     |
| J. Kapitulnik, O. Bibi & R. Koren . . . . .                                                                   | 291 |
| Rapporteur's Report                                                                                    |     |
| G.T. O'Connor . . . . .                                                                                       | 301 |

IV. HOST-VIRAL INTERACTIONS

|                                                        |     |
|--------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| Viral mechanisms of carcinogenesis                     |     |
| R.A. Weiss . . . . .                                   | 307 |
| Does hepatitis B virus cause hepatocellular carcinoma? |     |
| D. Trichopoulos, J. Kremastinou & A. Tzonou . . . . .  | 317 |
| Rapporteur's Report                             |     |
| G. Lenoir . . . . .                                    | 333 |

V. HOST VARIATION IN METABOLISM OF CARCINOGENS AND OTHER FOREIGN COMPOUNDS

|                                                                                                                                                               |     |
|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| ✓ Carcinogen-metabolizing enzymes and susceptibility to chemical carcinogenesis                                                                               |     |
| H. Bartsch, A. Aitio, A.M. Camus, C. Malaveille, H. Ohshima, B. Pignatelli & N. Sabadie . . . . .                                                             | 337 |
| Induction of the drug-metabolizing enzymes                                                                                                                    |     |
| A. Poland . . . . .                                                                                                                                           | 351 |
| ✓ Pharmacogenetics and human cancer                                                                                                                           |     |
| D.W. Nebert . . . . .                                                                                                                                         | 365 |
| Population studies of polymorphism in drug oxidation and its relevance to carcinogenesis                                                                      |     |
| J.C. Ritchie & J.R. Idle . . . . .                                                                                                                            | 381 |
| The role of aflatoxins and other aromatic hydrocarbons in human carcinogenesis                                                                                |     |
| E.A. Bababunmi, G.O. Emerole, A.O. Uwaifo & M.I. Thabrew . . . . .                                                                                            | 395 |
| Association of arylhydroxamic acid N,O -acetyltransferase and genetically polymorphic N -acetyltransferase in established inbred rabbit strains |     |
| W.W. Weber, D.W. Hein, I.B. Glowinski, C.M. King & R.R. Fox . . . . .                                                                                         | 405 |
| Determination of host genetic susceptibility to genotoxic chemicals in hepatocyte cultures                                                                    |     |
| C.A. McQueen & G.M. Williams . . . . .                                                                                                                        | 413 |
| Is aryl hydrocarbon hydroxylase induction 'systemically' regulated in man?                                                                                    |     |
| O. Pelkonen & N.T. Kärki . . . . .                                                                                                                            | 421 |
| Complex, dynamically interacting host factors that affect the disposition of drugs and carcinogens                                                            |     |
| E.S. Vesell . . . . .                                                                                                                                         | 427 |
| Rapporteur's Report                                                                                                                                    |     |
| E.S. Vesell . . . . .                                                                                                                                         | 439 |

VI. METHODS FOR IDENTIFYING INDIVIDUALS AT HIGH RISK — THEIR POTENTIAL AND LIMITATIONS

|                                                                                            |     |
|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| Application of mass spectrometric methods to analysis of xenobiotics in biological systems |     |
| M.L. Gross . . . . .                                                                       | 443 |
| Immunological detection and quantification of carcinogen-modified DNA components           |     |
| R. Müller, J. Adamkiewicz & M.F. Rajewsky . . . . .                                        | 463 |
| Application of cytogenetic methods to analysis of etiologic factors in carcinogenesis      |     |
| F. Mitelman . . . . .                                                                      | 481 |
| Studies of host factors in carcinogenesis using cultured human tissues and cells           |     |
| C.C. Harris, B.F. Trump, H. Autrup, I.C. Hsu, A. Haugen & J. Lechner . . . . .             | 497 |

|                                                                                  |     |
|----------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| Intestinal metaplasia of the stomach as a precancerous stage                     |     |
| ✓ T. Sugimura, N. Matsukura & S. Sato .....                                      | 515 |
| Does daily intake of green-yellow vegetables reduce the risk of cancer in man?   |     |
| An example of the application of epidemiological methods to the                  |     |
| identification of individuals at low risk                                        |     |
| T. Hirayama .....                                                                | 531 |
| Immunological detection and quantification of the reaction products of           |     |
| 2-acetylaminofluorene with guanine in DNA                                        |     |
| E. Kriek, C.J. van der Laken, J. Nagel & M. Welling .....                        | 541 |
| Autoradiographic study of DNA repair in respiratory epithelium in                |     |
| short-term organ culture                                                         |     |
| T. Ishikawa & S. Takayama .....                                                  | 551 |
| The susceptibility of normal hamster and human cells to transformation           |     |
| by environmental agents                                                          |     |
| J.A. DiPaolo, C.H. Evans & G.E. Milo .....                                       | 561 |
| Possibilities for identifying genotoxic risks in the rubber industry: use of the |     |
| urinary mutagenicity assay and sister chromatid exchange                         |     |
| H. Vainio, K. Falck, J. Mäki-Paakkanen & M. Sorsa .....                          | 571 |
| Rapporteur's Report                                                       |     |
| S.R. Tannenbaum .....                                                            | 579 |
| INDEX OF AUTHORS .....                                                           | 583 |